Sisters reunite

Two sisters who have not spoken to each other for three years get together to sort out their later father's estate with hilarious results in the final of Company Theatre's season of plays.

The Dear Departed sees Meg Foster and Yvonne Burgham play off each other as the two feuding sisters while Neil Burgham and newcomer Steve Brown play their husbands.

Jodi Rimmer also joins Company Theatre for her first appearance as the daughter of one of the sisters.

North Country English accents have been adopted for the play to add a touch of authenticity.

The two other plays for the evening are the Pinter play A Slight Ache and the comedy Scherzo in Two Flats, each with a completely different set to add to the atmosphere.

This season called Trilogy is on at St Michael's Church, King Edward Ave, Bayswater at 8pm on April 24-27 and May 1-4.

Pinter play for Company

Company Theatre has ventured out to begin the season called Trilogy with a Pinter play, A Slight Ache.

Geoff Clews and Anne Potter have taken on the task of presenting the play and both have enjoyed numerous tasks on stage from acting to lighting.

While Pinter tends to be confusing, the two comedies to follow should clear heads.

The second play is Scherzo in Two Flats with Robert Letcher, Ruth Mathieson and Pat Scott and shows what a lady goes through when she locks herself outside her flat first thing in the morning wearing nothing but a brunch coat.

Her predicament is ended only with severe damage to her neighbour's pipes and trousers.

The Dear Departed is the third play, another comedy with a hilarious conclusion. Two sisters who do not get on with each other very well have to get together with their sidekick husbands to sort out their late father's estate, with unexpected results.

The plays will be staged at St Michael's Church hall, King Edward Ave, Bayswater on April 19, 20, 24-27 and May 1-4 at 8pm. Bookings phone 498-475.
